

To make a good impression at a job, you should prepare for the interview ahead of time. First, assess your skills. Be candid with yourself when identifying your strengths and weaknesses. Second, learn as much about the employer as you can. Think about how your abilities would contribute to the organization.